“ I know how hopeful you sounded just a day before your passing. You said that you were feeling better and hoping to leave the nursing home soon. It should bring comfort to those that cared about you that you were in good spirits up until the end of your life. Although we divorced after 9 years of marriage, we remained friends and I was grateful for that friendship. I wish that your life health could have been better, but I know that childhood diabetes is such a hard disease and it tends to take people before their time. I know that you were afraid to have children because you were worried that their childhood might be similar to yours - doctors, low blood sugar, regimented meals and a continuous focus on keeping them safe and healthy.

However, I think you would have been a wonderful father and medical advances may have curbed your fears. Rest knowing that you had many friends who will remember you and the things you did during your lifetime.
