“ It was over half a century ago. We were school kids. The Craft family was our next door neighbors on county road 450 South. Sandy's two older brothers, Roger and Mike, were friends with my younger brother Lavelle. Sandy was just a sweet little kid in elementary school. I think it was several years later, about the time I joined the Air Force, that my brother Lavelle started dating Sandy. She was still in high school and Lavelle was a graduate with a steady job, and about ready to join the Army reserves. In 1973 they took the plunge and got married. I was my brother's best man. They had a nice wedding and I was happy for them. They had a promising future and the world was their oyster. I don't believe my brother could have ever found anyone better than this wonderful lady to spend his years with, to share his life with, to grow old with. This year would have been their 50th wedding anniversary. I think their story would make a great movie. Goodbye sister Sandy. We all miss you.
